

THE LILY

POSED BY BELLE BENNETT, JOHN SAINPOLIS, IAN KEITH AND A NOTED CASTFROM THE CELEBRATED
DAVID BELASCO PLAY

LILY-5

Dazed by the attitude of Odette whom he had believed broken by his treatment beyond the point of rebellion, the count hears himself denounced in his true colors. At first he cannot realize it is "The Lily's" voice, trembling with passionate anger, attacking him as she says, "Christiane disgraces the de Maigny name indeed. For years you have begotten your family of love and money that you might lead your loose life of luxury. Christiane's love has been good and pure; yours has been unworthy of the name."

Holding Christiane in her arms, Odette then announces to her startled parent, "Your tyranny is at an end, both over Christiane and myself." All the pent up anger and passion of years is unleashed as Odette, supreme in her love for her young sister, informs her ungrateful parent that henceforth she will devote herself entirely to Christiane. The count, bewildered by the rapid turn of events, bows his head in defeat.

Though fully aware of Odette's love for her and the lengths to which "The Lily" would go to make her happy Christiane, humiliated by her father's behavior, slips from the house, to seek comfort in Annaud's affection, and begs him to take her away with him to Paris, despite the damage such a step might do to her reputation. In his arms she sobbed out the story of her father's accusation and Odette's revelation of repressed passion.

"The Lily" is overcome with the events of the evening, and when Gustav Hyzar who has called when she was making such a passionate defense of Christiane's character, asks her to marry him, she refuses, declaring that until her sister is assured of a future free from frustrated love, she herself will not marry. Noticing Christiane's absence for the first time Odette, fearing she may do something rash leaves home with Hyzar to look for the girl.

To be concluded tomorrow.

Peaches Says She's Ended With Daddy

New Jersey was to try to avoid the service of papers in my suit.

Of course, he may try to avoid my suit as long as possible, but it won't do any good. My day in court will come, and to delay it will only drag out the misery for me. Perhaps that is what Mr. Browning is trying to do. He always loved to do things that would give me pain.

Browning Used to Suits

He is used to the courts and wise in their ways. He is always being sued for one thing or another. Just about the time of our separation he had a suit for $21,000 against him. And oh, how that worried him, and because he was worried he certainly made life miserable for me. He used to cry that he was losing all his money.

Imagine it! A man with all his millions crying over a little suit for $21,000. Like every cent he had was at stake. And no amount of money was worth the suffering he caused me—his own wife.

It was always the same; every little thing that disturbed him, he took it out on me.

Wants Suit Secret

I don't blame Mr. Browning for wanting the trial in secret. And I am perfectly willing to have it so. If it were in the open some of the girls who think Mr. Browning is the wonderful Cinderella Man would be disillusioned mighty quickly. And Mr. Browning wouldn't like that. And there are some other things he wouldn't like, either.

I have no desire to embarrass him. I have no desire to cause him any pain, although his desires toward me are quite the reverse.

He forced me to tell the story of my marital experiences with him in self-defense. It would be humiliating for me to tell that story again to the public. I want people to forget. I want to try to build a new life for myself, and I don't want to be associated any more than necessary with those terrible six months during which I lived with Mr. Browning as his wife. Now all that is in the past, thank Heaven.

The differences between Mr. Browning and myself are now a matter for judicial decision, and the quicker the better. All I ask is a fair trial, and I am sure I will have that.

In the last few days I have received many offers to appear on the stage. Some are very interesting, but I have not yet made up my mind what I shall do. I have always been very fond of the stage, and at one time in my life it appealed to me very much, but now things are so different.

It might be that the glitter of the footlights would help me forget, and, more than anything else, I want to forget. But I don't know. I must rest a while and try to get some peace of mind before I can decide just how I shall try to salvage the wreck of my life.

But I have one consolation. I know that nothing in the future can be so bad as what has already happened to me. So, whatever the days to come have in store for me, it will be happiness compared with my union to Mr. Browning.

What is the price of love? What is it worth? In tomorrow's chapter of her absorbing revelations Mrs. Browning will discuss these subjects in connection with her peculiar experiences as the wife of the millionaire Cinderella Man.

called up The GRAPHIC and insisted her name be left out of accounts of the Browning case. When her request was refused she threatened to send "psychic waves" to destroy the managing editor, but these "waves" failed to work, and the suit is her latest threat on material form.
